

Ward Vanlaar

Head of Research, Behavioural and Policy Department
Belgian Road Safety Institute

Ward Vanlaar is the head of research in the Behaviour and Policy Department of the Belgian Road Safety Institute (IBSR), where he has been employed since 1999. Ward has a Masters degree in Criminology and a Masters degree in Quantitative Analysis; he taught multivariate analysis at the Essex University Summer School in the U.K. He has participated in several European projects and served as an expert for the European Transport Safety Council. His main fields of interest are traffic enforcement issues, alcohol, drugs and driving, safety performance indicators, and statistics and methodology. He has published several reports and articles on drinking-driving, multilevel analysis and multidimensional scaling.